EVENT MEDICAL PLAN AND CHECKLIST

PLANNING FOR MEDICAL EMERGENCIES

Competitive bicycling can be a very exciting and fast-paced sport full of action, thrills and even spills. In planning an event, event directors and their staffs must consider not only how they will handle minor injuries such as cuts and bruises, but also major catastrophic injuries that will require full attention from trained medical personnel.

In the planning process for any event, time must be spent considering medical emergencies. Will there be trained Emergency Medical Technicians, doctors and an ambulance on site? Or, will the event rely on First Aid administered by volunteers or staff? How far is the hospital? Is there air ambulance service available? Can emergency vehicles reach all points on the course? These are only a few questions that should be carefully considered in the development of a full medical plan that can be on site and referred to in an emergency.

At an event, designate one staff member as the medical coordinator. This person will be responsible for the implementation of the medical plan and oversee any emergency evacuations. Medical plans should cover all participants, spectators and staff and cover all days of the event, including any officially designated practice days. Any occurrences at an event, no matter how seemingly minor, should be noted on a USA Cycling First Report of Occurrence and submitted to USA Cycling with your post event materials.

USA Cycling encourages event directors and organizers to use this form for designing a medical and event emergency plan. Organizers are welcome to add additional information if necessary. Please keep a copy of this list on hand at your event for reference in an emergency.
